Overview

In the spring of 2022, the fascinating 25hours Hotel Indre By opened its doors in the central part of Copenhagen. In addition to the 243 rooms that are in themselves worth an experience, the impressive building complex offers various gastronomic experiences in the restaurant, patisserie and bar, intended not only for hotel guests, but for Copenhageners as well. On the whole, 25hours is not just a hotel, but a potentially completely new meeting point in the middle of the Danish capital. The hotel is housed in three existing buildings between Rundetårn and the vibrant Købmagergade, but the main entrance will open to the charming, but largely forgotten Trinitatis Kirke Plads, which will now get a revival.

The interior design of the buildings has been created in collaboration between the renowned London agency Martin Brudnizki Design Studios and local architects from BPP Arkitekter, who have developed the hotel concept “Coming of Age”. Throughout the hotel, passion and knowledge, art and science will create the framework for an experience beyond the ordinary.

For 25hours, it's all about stories. Since 2005, the company has gained a great deal of attention with distinctive hotels in Germany, Austria, Switzerland, but also in Paris, Florence and in Dubai. Based on the motto “You know one, you know none”, 25hours designs hotels that focus on well-thought-out design details based on the cultural history of the special location. In the new 25hours Hotel Indre By, the history of the buildings has been the inspiration for the hotel concept. For many years the buildings housed a university. The hotel rooms come in two different styles: “Passion” and “Knowledge”. Common to all rooms are high-quality beds, air conditioning, sustainable cosmetics, flat-screen TVs, minibars, Kreafunk Bluetooth Speakers and free high-speed WiFi. On the other hand, size and decor will vary widely, and small, distinctive details which are part of the bigger story, will make the vast majority of the 243 rooms unique. For some of the rooms, as a special detail, there will be attached terraces with access to the Secret Garden.

As a guest at 25hours, one will quickly discover that there are hidden places to explore all over the hotel, whether it is the Vinyl Lounge or the Love Library. The international art consultancy VISTO has put together a collection of more than 100 works of art from the 19th century to the present, which are found everywhere in the hotel and which all speak into the overall concept – Coming of Age – in different, surprising ways. The central meeting point in the hotel is the Assembly Hall, where it is tempting to have a quick morning coffee, a much-needed snack after a city walk or refreshing drinks before getting ready for the Copenhagen nightlife. On the ground floor is also the meeting area of 25hours, where meetings can be held for up to 42 people in the four different conference rooms, which go by the names Doubt, Opinion, Style and F**k Everything.

On the first floor one will find the spacious wellness area, where in addition to a fully equipped gym there is a terrace with outdoor sauna and sun loungers for the ideal moment of relaxation. In addition, 25hours offers guests who arrive early and want to see the city before checking in the opportunity to use the PowerShower next to the sauna area – an area specially designed for early arrivals and late departures.

come as you are.

The hotel is located close to Nørreport Station, the central hub for the metro, express trains and buses, where there is also a direct connection to and from the airport. But above all, cycling is part of the Danish DNA and belongs to Copenhagen like the Smørrebrød. At 25hours Hotel Indre By, guests therefore have modern bicycles from the Berlin bicycle manufacturer Schindelhauer at their disposal. Classic city bikes are available for a leisurely tour of the neighbourhood. The largest rooms are accompanied by a bicycle in the room itself, which guests can use free of charge. A tour map curated especially for 25hours by cycling professionals with the most beautiful routes in the city is available at the reception.

Last but not least, guests and locals alike can look forward to culinary experiences at the 25hours Hotel Indre By. Once again 25hours has allied itself with several well-known people. The Molcho family opened their seventh NENI restaurant in a 25hours Hotel. With Café Duse, pastry chef Melissa Forti created a place of culinary delight with Italian pastries, tarts and cakes made exclusively with organic ingredients.

Moreover, it was in Copenhagen that the four founders Christoph Hoffmann, Kai Hollmann, Ardi Goldman and Stephan Gerhard conceived the concept for 25hours. Therefore, it was only a matter of time before a 25hours Hotel opened its doors where it all began. Today, with the 25hours Hotel in the Danish metropolis, there are a total of 15 hotels in the German-speaking countries as well as in Paris, Florence and Dubai.

Interior & Story

The hotel, with its great spatial complexity and colourful, humorous interior, was jointly designed by local architects from BPP Arkitekter in Copenhagen and British interior designers from Martin Brudnizki Design Studio in London, which over the years has become known as one of the world's best restaurant and hotel design studios. The entire hotel is based on the concept of Coming of Age. The 243 rooms will be found in two different design styles Knowledge and Passion, both of which stem from the history of the district as well as the history of the buildings.

The buildings have played a central role in this part of the city, which houses both the old University, Rundetårn and Regensen. The hotel's main entrance is next to Trinitatis Kirke Plads, just opposite is the old bookstore Arnold Busck, and behind it Gyldendal, Denmark's largest publishing house, which has been here for 150 years. In the buildings themselves that now accommodate the 25hours Hotel, there have been both printers and paper merchants. Until recently, professors and students had their daily life right here, as it was home to certain parts of the University of Copenhagen. It is thus a very special place in the city for learning, for thirst of knowledge and curiosity. Those elements have been a strong decisive factor for the concept at 25hours Hotel Indre By.

The rooms, which come in the style of Knowledge, are inspired by the old university offices of the professors. It has been a place full of knowledge, which the hotel has chosen to illustrate based on two of history's most pioneering scientists, Charles Darwin and Tycho Brahe. In the rooms, one of the walls will feature as a kind of blackboard, where you will find scribbled notes from the two scientists. For the Danish astronomer Tycho Brahe it is thoughts and ideas he scratched down back in the days while his eye rested in the night sky, and for Charles Darwin it is his records from his famous trip to the Galapagos Islands, as well as the letters he wrote to his father, to tell that he would not do what the father wanted, but instead follow his own path in life. In addition, there are lots of small accessories. In the Knowledge rooms guests will find artificial bones, butterflies under a glass bell, parrot feathers or even an artificial severed nose as Tycho Brahe famously had his nose tip cut off in a sword duel. While the rooms are characterised by blue and white tiles, the Passion rooms have been furnished with red and white tiles. These rooms are designed with inspiration from the many university students who over the years have had their daily lives in these buildings. Here, the back wall of the bed resembles a pin board made of cork, illustrating that made memories and experiences from childhood and adolescence accompany life forever. Guests are even allowed to add something new to the pinboard themselves – perhaps it will be allowed for good.

Project director at 25hours Hotel Indre By, Henning Weiß, says about the unusual design ideas: "Our main idea in the development of the hotel concept has been 'Coming of Age', which is linked to the building's history as a university. At the hotel, passion and knowledge as well as art and science find a new home in an exciting combination." The many rooms, whether Gigantic Suite or one of the 20 Medium Single rooms, all have many details. Some of them even have a small terrace and access to the Secret Garden which is pretty much unique in Copenhagen and which from the upper floors looks like a Persian rug. In addition, there are several distinctive rooms, such as the tower room towards the church, where it doesn't take much imagination to picture Rapunzel sitting there while she stares longingly into the air and lets her blonde hair fall to the ground.

come as you are.

In total, the 243 rooms at 25hours Hotel Indre By are so diverse and detail-oriented that one wants to come back to explore the other retreats.

However, it is far from only the rooms that are worth exploring. From the moment guests enter the main entrance, there will be an opportunity to pique their curiosity. On one side of the hallway towards the reception, turntables are ready to pamper the ear canals in the Vinyl Lounge, and on the other side one can relax by the fireplace in the Library of Love. Denmark was the first country in the world to release pornography in 1969, and it is now being celebrated at the hotel with its very own characteristic room. Following the hallway, one will also come across the Love Letter Station, which invites to sit down and write postcards for someone loved.

Whether it is towards the central Assembly Hall, the four conference rooms Doubt, Opinion, Style and F ** k Everything or the wellness area with the fully equipped fitness room, the terrace with outdoor sauna and associated sun loungers – the underlying hotel concept and the two design styles will be present at all times. The geometric figures of the carpet represent science, while the artistic wallpaper on the walls will represent creativity and passion.

Architecture & History

The 25hours Hotel Indre By situated in the old medieval district of Copenhagen between Rundetårn and Købmagergade is located just a short walk to Nørreport Station. The 21,000 square meter hotel is housed in three buildings with both long and faceted stories, which together with the area's history have made the basis for the brand new and fascinating hotel. From the very beginning of the project, BPP Arkitekter researched in all available archives, including the building case archive in Copenhagen, which was a pure treasure trove of information that made it possible to follow the buildings' development throughout history. Later, they also found photos of the original buildings in old photo archives.

In fact, parts of the history of the buildings date back to 1740, when the then royal tailor built a mansion on the very same site. Later, the buildings were used as, among other things, a royal institution for orphaned children, who earned their living by printing Bibles, and later as well as both a royal porcelain factory and a printer and paper factory. In 1895, however, a total renovation took place, where a completely new facade was also made. Therefore, the current buildings are dated to this. At the end of the 19th century, there was a huge building boom in Copenhagen, large parts of the city were under massive development, and right here the capital's first pure shop and commercial building was established. Before that, traders had typically lived above their shop or workshop, but that began to change with more and more commercial buildings, where this was the first of its kind. Much later, the buildings became home to parts of the University of Copenhagen, including the Faculty of Theology and Law until 2017.

The development of the special hotel concept was a collaboration between the local architects from BPP Arkitekter and the British interior designers from Martin Brudnizki Design Studio in London. It has been important for the architects both to rediscover the beauty of the original buildings, which over the years have been affected, and to recreate the architectural qualities. The restoration of the hotel's main entrance is particularly striking. This breathes new life into the beautiful but somewhat forgotten and sleepy square in front of Trinitatis Kirke. In addition, the old colours from the old houses have also been recreated. Together, the team of interior designers and architects succeeded in tracking down and reviving the architectural quality of the buildings. In this way, guests constantly move through a part of Copenhagen's history and can transport themselves back to a vanished time – whether it is indoors or outdoors. The many new additions are at the same time clearly recognizable throughout the hotel. Therefore, when moving around the complex, one will never be in doubt about what is new and what is old. It has created an exciting building full of discoveries to be found.

James Robson, Nordic Regional Director for Hines, who is the developer of the project, says: “25hours Hotels is an exciting, international brand that will offer something completely unique in the centre of Copenhagen. We are excited that our buildings are home to their first hotel in Denmark. Købmagergade's popular location and the dynamic combination of brands that we intend to work with will create an attractive destination for international tourists as well as the domestic market. It is a very positive investment in Copenhagen, which reflects the city's growing appeal as an international destination.”

Art & Design

The big existential questions will float in the air as soon as one steps inside the 25hours Hotel Indre By: How different are you today from your younger self? How different will you be tomorrow from your current self? Probably you will feel the same but look a little bit different in the mirror. Growing up comes hand in hand with changes but perhaps the more you change, the more you remain the same. Does anybody grow up, after all?

The international art consultancy VISTO has put together a collection of more than 100 works of art, which will figure around the hotel in very different ways, but all based on the overall concept Coming of Age. Already in the entrance hall, guests will discover that this is not the typical hotel experience. At the walls are eight illustrative works by Danish FRIDAJOHS Design Studio, which change depending on which angle one looks at them from. To one side, one first sees a baby who grows up with different moments in life, both the funny, crazy and serious, and on the other side, the Danish national bird the swan, which also goes through different stages of life – an anecdote to Hans Christian Andersen's "ugly duckling".

"When people walk into a hotel, they rarely expect an art experience. Even if there is art on the walls, many people think that it hangs there solely for decorative reasons and that there is no major narrative behind it. We basically believe in the idea of offering people the same hotel experience as if they were going to a museum or a gallery. If you want to, you can get a completely different experience at 25hours than you expected, which may even make you learn something about life," says Alex Toledano, Co-founder and President of VISTO Images. Together with his childhood friend Seth Rosenbaum, he created VISTO almost ten years ago. The two originally knew each other way back, from when they were both small kids in New Jersey in the early 1980s. As adults, they moved to Paris and Brussels, respectively, and when they both had a desire to remain in Europe, they co-founded their company. To begin with, they found and sold large and rare maps of neighbourhoods, cities, and countries around the world. It led to them being interviewed in various magazines, and because of that they were one day contacted by a project manager who wanted them to be involved in the process of curating art for the exclusive hotel The Lanesborough in London. Here they were given the task of creating an atmosphere from 1830s England, which was the time when the hotel building was originally created. "The big challenge was that the building was totally renovated, so how could we make it feel real? We ended up collecting a huge art collection, which we imagined a very wealthy family from 1830s England could have put together," explains Alex Toledano. Since then, VISTO has specialized in curating art collections for larger properties such as office buildings, residential properties and hotels. They also often help to develop the underlying narrative that will form the basis of the overall concept, as has been the case with 25hours Hotel Indre By.

This is not the first time that 25hours and VISTO are working together, though. It began with the opening of the 25hours Hotel Terminus Nord in Paris. Alex Toledano is originally a historian with a doctor title in the history of Paris' neighbourhoods. He had specialized in the neighbourhood where 25hours was about to open. Therefore, VISTO was given the task of helping to develop the hotel's basic history and curate the art.

come as you are.

“It eventually became an art collection that had the aim to open the eyes of tourists to a busy, cosmopolitan and diverse neighbourhood of the French capital, which few people otherwise choose because they do not associate it with the romantic Paris they imagine. When we curate collections, we make sure that the concept is present throughout. We never choose works of art just because they look good. They have to fit into a larger concept, as if you were given a guided tour in a museum. Everything in the hotel is carefully selected,” says Alex Toledano.

The same counts for 25hours Hotel Indre By, where the creative foundation has been grounded in the building’s history as a university building, which eventually became the concept Coming of Age. “25hours asked the question: When do you grow up? Do you ever do that? When you are in university, many people begin to question where they come from. It’s an exciting time full of changes. But the question is whether one’s life development is linear, or whether one keeps evolving at different times? We started exploring the whole idea and made it more clear, because for you to step into the hotel as a guest and understand the ideas behind it, it is very important to make the story clear,” explains Toledano.

Throughout the hotel, VISTO has curated the different spaces that each have their own little stories, but which at the same time speak into the big narrative. For example, at Café Duse guests will find a large number of art from the 19th century all the way up to 2021, which show women in many different stages of life. It is the oldest women who have the most fun, as a way to challenge how women are typically portrayed.

In the large Assembly Hall hangs jacquard woven fabrics by Finnish Kustaa Saksi, inside NENI the restaurant’s roots from the Levant are celebrated with works of art depicting Tel Aviv in many different ways, and in the Vinyl Lounge the process of falling in love is celebrated – both the good and the bad that comes with it – with works by, among others, the South Korean illustrator Henn Kim. The four central pieces are composed so that you can read the story as starting either from left to right or vice-versa, which shift the narrative.

In the Love Library, the release of pornography in Denmark as the first country in the world is in focus. One finds for example a vintage poster from Gabriel Axel’s campaign film “The Dear Toy”, which at the time aimed to promote the idea of the liberation of pornography. With works by the Turkish 3D artist Mehmet Geren, the broken hearts, the failed relationships and the inner doubts are at the centre of the library.

In the meeting rooms on the other hand, there are artworks that pay homage to both the cannabis culture and the young generations’ resistance to the older generations, which constantly changes the world in small steps.

For the reception area, the Spanish artist Alicia Martín has created a large sculpture called Tree of Knowledge, which together with a surrealistic photo collage pays tribute to books in general. The 3,000 donated books came from the publisher Gyldendal, who resides next door to the 25hours Hotel.

“Some will just step into the hotel and find it nice and colourful, while others will dive deeper into it to understand the many details. If you do, you will discover that there is a deeper meaning, with everything you see. It is our hope that it will be an experience that you will learn something from and that you will always remember. The art is good, the story is strong, and I hope that people in Copenhagen like it. We ourselves are very proud of it,” says Alex Toledano.

come as you are.

Guests are also able to look into the book “Coming of Age”, which VISTO has developed together with 25hours Hotels. Here the various art at the hotel is described, but one will also come across Søren Kierkegaard’s love letters, stories such as H.C. Andersen’s “The wild swans” and stories from “The Egtved Girl’s” time.

“Based on especially Danish culture, we try to show different approaches to growing up. The book will hopefully give people an understanding of why they encounter all these things around the hotel. And it will then hopefully help people to actually learn more about themselves. It all revolves around the underlying question: When did you stop growing as a human being? Will you ever do that? Because all phases of life have their own potential for you to grow, explore and discover both the world and yourself,” says Alex Toledano.

NENI København

What suits a hotel for open-minded individualists better than a genuine cosmopolitan gastronomy concept? NENI København offers special culinary experiences for both hotel guests and locals. Behind NENI is the Molcho family with the passionate celebrity chef, TV host, cookbook author and catering entrepreneur Haya Molcho at the helm. For the seventh time, the family opened a restaurant in a 25hours Hotel. There will be something to look forward to, whether it is for a light lunch, a refreshing snack or a sumptuous dinner with dessert on top. NENI combines local with the best from far-flung places to create eclectic Eastern Mediterranean cuisine.

It was as a child in Tel Aviv, that Haya Molcho learned to cook and appreciate the meal as a community ritual. Her grandmother excelled at the pots, and when Haya herself was no more than three years old she stood next to the matriarch as the helpful assistant. During her upbringing, Haya found culinary inspiration in several different regional styles. From the Persian region and the Arab countries to Russia. As an adult, she married the legendary mime, Samy Molcho, and when he toured the world, she went along. She often went on walks herself in the cities they visited and knocked on the door of a restaurant to offer her help in the kitchen for the night. In that way she gained insight into the culinary traditions in vastly different countries such as France, Germany, China, India and Thailand. Today, Haya and Samy Molcho live in Vienna, where they also run a cooking school. Most famous, however, is the NENI restaurant, which name comes from the initials of their four sons, Nuriel, Elior, Nadiv and Ilan. They are also involved in the family business.

“For me, NENI is the most cosmopolitan, soulful food I have ever experienced,” says 25hours founder Christoph Hoffmann. “We really appreciate the Molcho family as creative restaurateurs, and our paths have become inseparable.”

Although NENI is a great discovery into the many small treasures of global cuisine, the relaxing setting of the restaurant itself is also an invitation to lower your shoulders and let yourself be sucked into a world of surprising meetings and lively talk around the tables. For Haya Molcho and the rest of the family, eating should never be lonely or serious. On the contrary, it must be passionate and social. Even before guests get to enjoy it, they will feel like part of the family.

Café Duse

“Il dolce far niente”. The term that describes the very special, relaxed way of life of the Italians or the art of doing nothing, cannot be translated quite accurately. But it does not matter either. The philosophy can now be found in the middle of the Danish capital by Italian Melissa Forti. Here will be everything the heart desires of cakes and pies. And above all, there will be room to enjoy a quiet moment for oneself. For the well-known baker, the very essence of life is the beautiful, lovely, peaceful moments.

Fifteen years ago, Melissa Forti began making Anglo-Saxon specialties for her own pleasure. Out of it grew an interest in finding old and forgotten Italian recipes and combining them with other, newer recipes from around the world. Today, she is known for her own characteristic style that pamper the taste buds with both aroma and texture. “I love searching for old-fashioned recipes and giving them a new and modern twist. It is the traditional that meets the modern,” says Melissa Forti. Since opening her first shop in 2009, she has made a name for herself with a bit of everything. Among other things, she has designed Afternoon tea at the Royal Academy of Arts in London, written the bestseller “The Italian Baker”, and with great success run “Melissa’s Tea Room and Cakes” in her home country Italy, where she has also become a TV celebrity. With the opening of Café Duse, now Denmark will get to enjoy Melissa Forti and her delicious baked goods. Although she is relaxed by nature, she is also perfectionist and she chooses only the best, organic products for her cakes and pies. In addition, she uses neither gelatine nor artificial dyes and uses only very small amounts of sugar.

The café is named after the iconic Italian actress Eleonora Giulia Amalia Duse, also known as “Duse”, who transformed the theatre world and came by Copenhagen in 1906 on a large-scale world tour. Still today, she has great influence in her home country, and for Melissa Forti, she stands as an iconic woman. Forti says: “I want to take this opportunity to honour and pay tribute to this remarkable woman – and all the exceptional women in general.”

As always when it comes to 25hours Hotels, stories simmer beneath the surface waiting to be unfolded. The same goes for Café Duse. In exactly the same place where the café opened its doors in the middle of Copenhagen, there was a coffee and tearoom about 100 years ago. “I felt a strange but very sincere connection to the building, which is also the reason why I had to be a part of this project. When I discovered that there had once been a café, it only made even more sense to me. I feel as if I have been given the honour of bringing the old café back to life through Café Duse,” explains Melissa Forti.

Over the years, Melissa Forti has become known for authentic service and first-class products. She makes everything from scratch, and therefore cakes and pies at Café Duse will be made from the best products that Denmark has to offer. On the whole, it suits the Italian cake rock star extremely well to bring her homemade baked goods to Copenhagen. “It’s a dream come true to be here, where the gastronomic scene is one of the most interesting in the world. I hope that Café Duse can become an integral part of Danish culture. That would make me very proud,” she says. Her wish is that the café become a place where one enjoys a quiet moment in Copenhagen, whether as a hotel guest or a local. A place to visit alone to read a book, listen to music or just to relax a little in the stressful daily routine while enjoying a wonderful piece of cake. Or a place to meet with friends to spend a time together. A place to visit simply if one wants to experience the Italian “Il dolce far niente”.

come as you are.

“I deeply believe that we should all return to a simpler but more genuine lifestyle. With real food for real people in beautiful surroundings that can enrich one’s mind and soul. Danes know a thing or two about enjoying meals and having fun, so in that area Italians and Danes have a lot in common. We value quality products and beauty in all its forms. We love good style and we love spending valuable time with those we care about,” explains Melissa Forti.

Rendezvous

Since September 2023, guests can find Rendezvous bar at the charming basement room at 25hours Hotel Indre By. The classic cocktail bar with a modern touch is the latest addition to the hotel, in the midst of Copenhagen. It celebrates the creative cocktail culture and offers local spirits and elegant drinks.

Michael Sigaard-Pedersen is at the helm of this venture and an award-winning bartender with a decade of experience in Danish hospitality. He brings fresh and unique concepts to life. “I am incredibly excited to embark on this new chapter. With my background in bartending and the unique concept I have been working on for years, I am really looking forward to bringing something very special to our guests,” he says and adds: “Rendezvous is centered around the themes of knowledge and passion. Cocktails are considered an art form and our unwavering belief in creativity, quality, curiosity and good company.”

And what's on the menu? Signature cocktails, fine spirits, vermouths and classic drinks. The “Americano Beauty” is for example the first heritage cocktail of Rendezvous. It is a Denmark's top 10 cocktail from the Campari Red Hand competition and inspired by red roses of the cult movie American Beauty alongside the classic negroni boozy base and the fresh quality of a classic Americano. The focus is more on a mandarin citrus profile with black walnut and a house made hibiscus cordial complementing the classic bitterness. “A Night at The Roxbury”, another signature cocktail, is served up in a shiny disco ball, guaranteeing a good night. Based with a sumac spice infused vodka, it is built with a rhubarb and pink peppercorn syrup and rose water. Crafted for 24 hours, the “Numero Ocho” combines Tequila Ocho with cacao butter in a sous vide for 7 hours and is left in the freezer overnight. That gives it a buttery fat texture that combined with Peychaud and rhubarb leaves a stunning tequila cocktail.

For 25hours Hotels, it is always important to create meeting points for both guests and locals. The Rendezvous bar in Copenhagen is one of those. It is a place to discover with old friends, for a night of shenanigans, stories, cocktails and new companions. In addition, visitors can look forward to a range of events, including industry masterclasses, cocktail competitions, cocktail classes with friends, bartender takeovers, live entertainment and a regular bar quiz.
